Artist Profile: SKULLS (previously Fleeingnewyork)

SKULLS are a writhing, stomping dirty blues-inflected three piece with the attack of Dinosaur Jr., P.J. Harvey's bite and - whisper it - a wall of sound the Hendrix Experience would be jealous of.

Bandmates Russell Marsden (jazzmaster guitar and singing), Emma Richardson (dang bass guitar and singing and dancing) and Matt Hayward (fighting the drums) first met in college and developed their power-trio dynamics over long summer evenings in a garden shed by the Southampton docks. Soon they set sail for the city and picked up the harder, more worldly edge that spices their sound, while managing to retain some of the pop sensibility that sweetens the harshest of hangovers.

SKULLS have travelled the world, rocking in Japan, the US and mainland Europe as well as Russia. They've returned with a treasure-chest heaving with new songs, spitting fire and brimstone, and we count ourselves damn lucky to even listen to their amazing, butcheringly glamorous new songs - roll on a SKULLS EP!
